

REMONETIZATION IN CONNECTION WITH RESUMPTION.

In the course of next year France proposes to resume specie payments. In any nation in the present state of the money market it is France. That nation at this time has more gold coin and bullion within its limits than any other in the world. It is wonderful indeed that it should be so. Seven years ago France went through a war which cost her a prodigious expenditure of blood and treasure, and within five years she paid the last installment of the tribute imposed upon her by her victorious antagonist...

However this may be, the alternative will soon have to be adopted. If there be anything in the financial sketch of Europe that we have given above, the nations of the world are beginning to find the simple gold standard impracticable. They fear that silver would become too cheap for the world's use as money; they are now discovering that gold alone is too dear for the purpose.

But we seem to be wandering from the main question, which is, can the United States resume specie payments in gold on January 1, 1879? Practically the United States has no gold in the Treasury. For the exact figures we must refer to Gen. Wainwright's speech on this subject. Our readers can study there what would be required and what we have. Clearly the gold is not there, and where it is to come from? We have seen the condition of those communities which hold the gold; it is clear that to go there for it would be a more hopeless task during the coming year than it was for Mr. Boutwell when he went for wool and came back shorn. It is so demonstrable that it cannot be done, that to say what ought to be done, to discuss it in a moral point of view, seems trifling with realities.

Before physical possibility ought and ought not are considered, it might as well be said that we ought to bring down the moon from her orbit and coin her to redeem our notes. This is the supposition that silver is not remonetized; but supposing it is, what then? Can we resume specie payments? Not by Jan. 1, 1879. We have shown that the effects of remonetization can only be partially realized by that time. But, say four years hence, suppose the United States have coined in that time $150,000,000 in silver; suppose France to have relaxed her restrictions on silver coinage; which we think there is no doubt she will have done by that time; suppose we have initiated in India by the English Government, necessitating immense supplies of silver to pay the workmen...

It must be admitted that there are a great many ifs in all this and that all of them are not likely to be realized, but they all lie in the direction which public opinion is believing, and substantially we believe that such will be the world's policy for the next few years. We are far from having adopted the heresy of a permanent inconvertible currency; such a heresy would never, we believe, have been heard of but for the oppressive evils of double contraction of our currency, both metallic and paper; but we have availed ourselves of the possibility of redemption by an arbitrary enactment, and we have always believed the possibility of it by means of enlightened legislation, monetary, financial and commercial, and what should be the nature of that legislation we have now indicated, and that completes a few words for our next paper on the right and wrong of resumption.

EL PASO TEXAS. The news from this district is painful in the extreme, but properly looked at has no tendency to war with Mexico. The violent proceedings in El Paso originated with a mob there who are not Mexicans at all but American citizens. It appears that the company of rangers sent there to quell the mob were compelled to surrender to them for want of ammunition, and that (whether before or after the surrender does not appear) Judge Howard, agent for the salt mines, and Atkinson and McBride, rangers, were shot by the insurgents. There is no evidence that the insurgents received aid from the Mexicans beyond the Rio Grande. All these transactions are very much distorted and exaggerated by every corner of the two republics, seeking more genial homes in Arkansas and Texas.

THE HOUSE COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION and Labor has reported favorably on the bill to reimburse William and Mary College, Virginia, for property destroyed by the Federal soldiers, September 9, 1862. The reasons given by the committee for the restoration of the building by the Government are as follows: "First—Among the colleges of the period preceding the war, this was the most potent force for accomplishing our independence and framing our Constitution; no one can claim a more illustrious name than that of the William and Mary. Secondly, the committee believe that if the accidents of war had not intervened, the building would have been restored by the Government or of Independence Hall, in Philadelphia, Congress would have been held there, and the memory of Washington should be honored by restoring the seat of learning whose services were the pleasure of his last year. Thirdly, according to the laws of nations, institutions of learning are exempt from all expropriations from the ravages of war. General Washington recognized this fact. During the battle of Princeton, the Americans, in dislodging the British from the College building, fired a cannon shot through the wall. Washington, in order to make good to the college the damage sustained by the British troops, made the trustee a present of fifty guineas. When the British occupied the buildings of William and Mary College in the Revolutionary war they respected its treasures and left everything untouched, except the clock. The war, Louis XVI, the ally of America, caused the buildings accidentally destroyed by the fire of his troops to be repaired. Other instances of the restoration of college buildings and literary treasures are cited both from the history of the war of 1812 and from that of the war of 1862."

MORE ABOUT THE COVING-GORDON DIFFICULTY.

The following is cut from the Washington correspondence of the Cincinnati Commercial: "WASHINGTON, December 17.—Senator McDonald, of Missouri, has introduced a bill for the relief of the Coving-Gordon difficulty. The bill is to be reported to the Senate on Monday. It is a bill to amend an act passed in 1862, which authorized the Secretary of the Treasury to issue bonds in payment of the claims of the Coving-Gordon family. The bill provides that the Secretary should issue bonds in payment of the claims of the Coving-Gordon family, and that the bonds should be payable to the order of the Secretary of the Treasury. The bill is a measure of justice to the Coving-Gordon family, and it is believed that it will be passed by the Senate without delay."

MACHAMON YIELDS.

The stubborn old Marshall has at last concluded to let the good people of France enjoy their Christmas in tranquility, without reading the rattle of musketry in the streets of Paris. Marshal has been authorized by the Cabinet selected from the able men of the Left Centre or moderate Republicans, and he has done so, M. Leon Saye being President of the Council. The President found that the choice was between that and establishing the Bonapartist dynasty by force of arms, and he wisely and patriotically chose the better alternative.

MATTERS IN THE EAST.

The Turkish Sultan has published an abject entreaty for peace on reasonable terms in the form of a circular to the courts of Europe. It is evidently (though not so expressed in words) addressed primarily to England. Before war was commenced England advised the Turkish Government to accept terms much less onerous than she is now willing to admit, and was contemptuously snubbed for her trouble; it is not likely now that England will have any voice in the terms upon which peace will be based.

CONGRESS ADJOURNS ON THE 17th.

Congress adjourned on the 17th to meet again on Jan. 10th. Before adjourning a personal message was received from the President, Messrs. Gardner of Georgia and Conkling of New York. It was settled by each gentleman explaining his words in a Pickwickian sense, and the details are not worth publishing. Silver and resumption both stand over till after Christmas.

INGERSOLL IN THE CAPITOL.

From our Washington Correspondent. Bob Ingersoll delivered his lecture on liberty to a large audience in Lincoln Hall. Judging from the Cabinet ministers, members of Congress, literateurs, ladies and lawyers that went to hear him, and from their close attention and frequent applause, his lecture was a great success. As to his views he seemed to be a little more heterodox than Henry Ward Beecher; more profane and entertaining than Wendell Phillips; not so sweet as Phoebe Cushman or Victoria Woodhull, and, I might add, that he has evidently not traveled as much as Parson Newman, for while the latter talks incessantly about the Hindus and the river Ganges, Mr. Ingersoll said himself to the sarcophagus of Iniquity, and the rest of it. He had been asked to give a lecture in the city to-night, Ingersoll and Beecher would attract the largest houses. Neither of them would say anything new; the day of revelation has gone by, there are no more messages to be delivered. Thanks to the invention of printing, the time has passed when one man can thunder from a platform, pulpit or professor's chair, while his neighbors must sit in the seats of laymen. Mr. Ingersoll said that he believed in Darwin; that he was not sure he was right; but that on that question his mind was about eight to seven. He ridiculed the idea that women were not fit for politics, and said that they could not get the country into a worse fix than he had just helped to get it himself; that from the small amount of raw material used in the manufacture of Eve, from one of Adam's cullets, it was the best piece of work that had been put up.

Take This For Texas Ever.

The papers in the older Southern States continue to note the departure of emigrants in hordes to Texas, and to deprecate the ignis fatuus that leads them to seek their fortunes in the West. It may seem surprising, but it is a fact, that the same deprecating feeling, but to a certain extent shared by the people of Texas. The novelty and sensational effects, formerly experienced with a patriotic pride at witnessing the grand stream of immigration that ever poured into any American State, have greatly diminished, and a more practical view of the subject now obtains. It is true that our politicians, embryonic as well as full-fledged, aspiring to future public honors, may prefer to see the stream of immigration and unabating volume, having an eye to the increase of Congressional representation after the census of 1880; but the majority of thoughtful Texans do not care any longer to see the coming of the penniless and shiftless element, which forms no part of the population. This is the more the case, as the influx of immigrants for the sake of poor immigrants that for years has been the immigrant of Texas offers unequalled inducements in prospects of wealth and happiness, and a cordial welcome awaits every corner of our broad Commonwealth. Furthermore, those who have means and industry can do better by staying at home and using their means and industry there with intelligence.

An Emphatic Declaration From the Merchants' Exchange.

The Nashville news is still quite doubtful. The opposition seems determined if they cannot vote the compromise down to kill it by dilatory proceedings; meantime the business men of Nashville express themselves in the most decided terms on the side of State credit. We deem their action most important; it shows not only the sterling integrity of their principle, but a due appreciation of the fact that the blighting effect of a dishonored State credit will fall first on them; not in the end on the State, whatever their opinions, but the mercantile interest is like a finely constructed barometer, it feels the approach of dangerous weather before a cloud is visible to ordinary eyes. We submit a report of their proceedings in the Merchants' Exchange on the 18th inst., as reported in the columns of the Nashville American: "There was a full attendance of gentlemen on the 18th inst. in the direct question, at the Merchants' Exchange, yesterday morning. President McGuire stated that as the Cabinet trade committee was not quite ready to report, the committee on State credit would submit its report. Mr. J. F. Whelless, from the latter committee then made the following report: 'MERCHANTS' EX. OF NASHVILLE, NASHVILLE, Dec. 18. Let Your committee appointed to recommend such action as seemed to them appropriate to be taken by your body relative to the question of State credit, desire to submit the accompanying preamble and resolution for your consideration. Respectfully, A. G. ADAMS, Wm. H. EVANS, J. N. SPERRY, J. W. GIBSON, J. H. WILKES. Whereas, The unsettled condition of our State debt is seriously disturbing the public mind and injuring the credit of our people; and Whereas, It is inevitable that a failure on the part of the present Legislature to reach an agreement with the creditors of the State, will result in results disastrous to all the interests involved, and especially so in the effect it will have upon the prosperity and general welfare of our own people; and Whereas, The proposition now under consideration by the Legislature, to issue bonds in payment of the present bonds and accrued interest at five per cent. of the face value, is one that should be accepted without hesitation; therefore Resolved, That it is our earnest desire that the Legislature should promptly accept the liberal offer of silver to fund the present bonds and accrued interest at five per cent. of the face value, and that it should discharge the obligations assumed by the State in the adjustment of the same; and Resolved, That it is our earnest desire that the Legislature should promptly accept the liberal offer of silver to fund the present bonds and accrued interest at five per cent. of the face value, and that it should discharge the obligations assumed by the State in the adjustment of the same;
